BREED THEATER.

A Change of Heart, Beautiful Biography Drama.

With the advent of Thursday comes the change of programme at the Breed theater, and for this part of the week the very thrilling and intensely human story entitled The Change of Heart, is the great feature. This is the wonderful story of a man who, being a wealthy parents is enabled to indulge in any moral caprice that he desires. This time he is fascinated by a country girl who is seen by him in the act of passing her home in his auto. He calls repeatedly, pressing his attentions, and finally proposing to her. She is naturally flattered, and the young villain subjects her to a mock marriage ceremony, he treating the whole matter as a joke, but she is determined that she has been legally married. Meanwhile her old father has heard it was joked, and that the whole thing was a joke, and hurries her to her old home. The reckless youth's mother arrives from abroad, and hearing of the matter, gives the wayward son sound advice, and he immediately starts for the girl's home and takes her to her own parents, who marries them.

Three other big features are on the bill, all of vital interest, and Miss Wolcott will continue her former success by singing the immensely popular song hit from The Merry Widow, entitled "My Villa."

THE AUDITORIUM.

Perhaps what might be termed an unusual circumstance is to have two Harvard college men appearing on the same vaudeville bill in a town of this size. But the Auditorium is favored in this way the present week with Mr. Herbert Marshall, the well known athlete and hand balancer, and Mr. Lou Smith, the cornetist and composer of many of the songs of the day. Mr. Marshall, while pursuing his studies at Harvard, under his own name, represented his college in many athletic meets, and was afterward appointed on the coaching staff.

The sketch entitled "A Country Boy's Luck," is to say the least clever and entertaining. Mr. Burton is a natural comedian, and is able to make his partner, Miss Beatrice Shea, who is of neat appearance and the possessor of an exceptionally pleasing personality, by which she is enabled to hold the closest attention of her audience.

Casey and Smith are the hit of the bill this week, and their comedy musical act, which is away from the general run of musical acts and is a scream throughout. The Mr. Lou Smith spoken of above is the comedy member of this clever team.

A graceful and pretty dancer is Greta Byron, who entertains her audience in a most pleasing manner in the twelve minutes she is behind the footlights.

The Marshall brothers are acrobats of more than ordinary ability, and introduce many hair raising stunts in the hand and head balance line. They are boys of wonderful physique, and show themselves to be perfect marvels of strength.

Miss Morelle is scoring heavily with her songs this week, and for the last night sang "Coming Thro' the Rye" in fine voice.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Conflicting Statements.

Mr. Editor: The writer made one of his periodical trips down to New London, his old home, last week, and as usual met many men of prominence, and of course listened to many conflicting statements and contradictory theories relative to the all around municipal status—political and otherwise of the City of the Sea. The only trouble experienced was in attempting to swallow the several statements that were diametrically antagonistic to each other. For instance, the statement by some that in the election of Mr. Mahan for mayor the people did the wisest and best thing for New London that has been done for many years. That he would make a good, efficient and economical executive and that he had already advocated reducing the number of political positions now held by municipal salaries as burdensome supervisors. This matter was discussed by some and his honor caused by others. On the other hand many were of the opinion that Mr. Mahan would go right ahead attending to the business of the public when the same does not conflict with his own private business. In the meantime Mr. Mahan seems to be mostly interested right now in being mayor, leaving the future to take care of itself.

But what struck the writer most forcibly was the quiet work done on that ancient landmark, which one day had set the old court house at the junction of State and Huntington streets. How well you truly recollect the good old days when time was seemingly brand new, when sometime during the forenoon court opened for business and the late Augustus Brannager, Hon. Thomas Walker and other legal but lesser lights would exclaim the law, point the witnesses and proceed to the jury their voices relative to the evidence extracted. At the ringing of the Lucetta Shaw chapter, B. A. R., held April 24, 1886, the following is one of the resolutions unanimously adopted:

"Resolved That the court house is to be a valued heritage from an honorable past, to be preserved for its architectural character, checked for its great age, honored for its years of association with the history of this town and county, and it looks to the writer as though, when this patchwork is completed, that to find a vestige of the venerable building remaining would be like diving for oysters in the average restaurant stew."

But the old house seems to be in pretty fair condition nearly up to date. It is a thoroughly characteristic. But a mistake is not often discovered until a little late to be of the best advantage, and it looks to the writer as though, when this patchwork is completed, that to find a vestige of the venerable building remaining would be like diving for oysters in the average restaurant stew.

A number of young people enjoyed a dance in L'Heureux hall on Tuesday night. This hall is to be entirely renovated soon. It is now situated on the fourth floor, but the floor and partitions are to be removed, making the hall on the third floor, the height of two stories. The entrance will be where the right hand window of the ice cream parlor now is, and the entire third floor will be made into a large hall, with a small stage on the Railroad side. The most money and attention will be expended on the floor. There will be three floors, as there is already one, over which there will be laid another of ordinary lumber, and the top will be white maple, over 2,600 feet being used, and with a floor interlocking, the floor scraped and matched and waxed to perfection, there will be one of the best floors in this vicinity.
